Re: Position of Senior Front End Engineer

Dear MailChimp Talent Acquisition Team,

It is with great interest that I am applying to you for the position of Senior Front End Engineer at your organization. I have around 4 years of experience in this field intersecting creativity and technology. I sincerely believe that becoming a part of your organization would help me gain knowledge as well as contribute in your company's growth with my skills and competencies. I have enclosed my resume herewith for your kind reference.

Belonging to the tech-savvy generation had created an interest within me for technology, programming, and web development, which transformed into a passion making me pursue my education in this field, receiving certification in a interactive web development program. I have considerable knowledge of primary front-end programming languages such as HTML5, CSS3, Javascript, along with interactive design programs in the Adobe Creative Suite and Sketch. I also debug and create web applications that help with getting a better user experience with proper optimization of usability of the applications. I understand the immense role played by web design and development as branding tools for a business or client, with proper streamlining of usability of the mobile and web applications in a fast-paced and agile environment. I can provide examples of my work when meeting in person with you, showcasing my talent and skills, thereby proving my candidature for the job position.

I would love the opportunity to meet you in person and discuss how my development skills can help in the branding of your company. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Richard Lee
